THE LINCOLN MONUMENT.—The following is a description of the design of Larkin G. Meade, adopted by the Lincoln Monument Levelship.

Meade, adopted by the Lincoln Monument Association:

The die is seventy feet high, and the total height is one hundred feet. The foundation and sub-base are of granits, and the artist proposes the architectural work to be of Raverceoni marble, and the statues of bronze. The obelisk is surmounted by the eagle and globe. At the base a pedestal is projected in front, on which is a colonial statue of Lincoln. On a plain below, at the four cardinal politis, are four pedestals, on which are groups representing the infantery, can alry, artillery, and marine everys of the service. Encircling these pedestals are tablets, on which are written the names of all the States. These tablets are linked together, and the whole work indicates that, through the wise courselis of the President and the endurance of the soldiers and sailors, the Union has been preserved and perpetuated. On the four sides of the base are tablets for inscriptions. That in front and under the statue bears the name in full—Abraham Liucoln. The sub-base is reached by stairs from the corners of the base, and under the base is the crypt for the remains. The door of the crypt is also the entrance to the passage and stairway, which ascends the monument inside.
